WHITE RABBIT

For years, our dog tormented the white rabbit, drank his water, spilled his grain, stole his carrots, leeks, sat, unbudging, on his lettuce and dandelion leaves.

She’d climb into his basket, uncomfortable, obstinate, hugely overflowing, while the rabbit stalked away, hid underneath the sideboard, slept.

Yet, creeping down one night when everyone was sleeping, puzzled by a bumping I’d heard several times before, I saw them, dog and rabbit, galumping round the kitchen, halting, grinning at each other, galumping round again.

From time to time he’d crouch, She’d lick him, head to tail, or she’d lie, chest quivering, legs surrendered to the air, while he lolloped up to her, leapt across her body, hind legs skimming through her fur.

When the rabbit died she was sitting on his carrot. All week, she lay under the sideboard, growling. And late each night, if I strained into the dark, I heard her moans.

b) Shakespeare:

Female:  THE MERCHANT OF VENICE
Act 3  Scene 4

PORTIA:
Come on, Nerissa. I have work in hand
That you yet know not of. We’ll see our husbands
Before they think of us.

NERISSA:
Shall they see us?

PORTIA:
They shall, Nerissa, but in such a habit
That they shall think we are accomplished
With that we lack. I’ll hold thee any wager,
When we are both accoutered like young men
I’ll prove the prettier fellow of the two,
And wear my dagger with the braver grace,
And speak between the change of man and boy
With a reed voice, and turn two mincing steps
Into a manly stride, and speak of frays
Like a fine bragging youth, and tell quaint lies
How honourable ladies sought my love,
Which I denying, they fell sick and died.
I could not do withal. Then I’ll repent,
And wish for all that that I had not killed them;
And twenty of these puny lies I’ll tell,
That men shall swear I have discontinued school
Above a twelvemonth. I have within my mind
A thousand raw tricks of these bragging jacks
Which I will practise.

NERESSA:
Why, shall we turn to men?

PORTIA:
Fie, what a question’s that
If thou wert near a lewd interpreter!
But come, I’ll tell thee all my whole device
When I am in my coach, which stays for us
At the park gate; and therefore haste away,
For we must measure twenty miles today.

b)  Shakespeare:
Male:  A MIDSUMMER NIGHT’S DREAM

Act 3 Scene 2

PUCK: My mistress with a monster is in love,
Near to her close and consecrated bower,
While she was in her dull and sleeping hour,
A crew of patches, rude mechanicals,
That work for bread upon Athenian stalls,
Were met together to rehearse a play
Intended for great Theseus’ nuptial day.
The shallowest thick-skin of that barren sort,
Who Pyramus presented in their sport
Forsook his scene, and enter’d in a brake,
When I did him at this advantage take;
An ass’s nowl I fixed on his head:
Anon his Thisbe must be answered,
And forth my mimick comes. When they him spy,
As wild geese that the creeping fowler eye,
Or russet-pated choughs, many in sort,
Rising and cawing at the gun’s report,
Sever themselves, and madly sweep the sky;
So, at his sight, away his fellows fly,
And, at our stamp, here o’er and o’er one falls;
He murder cries, and help from Athens calls.
Their sense thus weak, lost with their fears thus strong,
Made senseless things begin to do them wrong;
For briers and thorns at their apparel snatch;
Some sleeves, some hats, from yielders all things catch.
I led them on in this distracted fear,
And left sweet Pyramus translated there;
When in that moment, so it came to pass,
Titania wak’d and straightway lov’d an ass.

SNOW IN THE SUBURBS

Every branch big with it,
Bent every twig with it;
Every fork like a white web-foot;
Every street and pavement mute;
Some flakes have lost their way, and grope back upwards, when
Meeting those meandering down they turn and descend again.
The palings are glued together like a wall,
And there is no waft of wind with the fleecy fall.

A sparrow enters the tree,
Whereon immediately
A snow-lump thrice his own slight size
Descends on him and showers his head and eyes,
And overturns him
And near inurns him
And lights on a nether twig, when its brush
Starts off a volley of other lodging lumps with a rush.

The steps are a blanched slope,
Up which, with feeble hope,
A black cat comes, wide-eyed and thin;
And we take him in.

SPRING

Nothing is so beautiful as spring –
When weeds, in wheels, shoot long and lovely and lush;
Thrush’s eggs look little low heavens, and thrush
Through the echoing timber does so rinse and wring
The ear, it strikes like lightnings to hear him sing;
The glassy peartree leaves and blooms, they brush
The descending blue; that blue is all in a rush
With richness; the racing lambs too have fair their fling.

What is all this juice and all this joy?
A strain of the earth’s sweet being in the beginning
In Eden garden. – Have, get, before it cloy,
Before it cloud, Christ, Lord, and sour with sinning,
Innocent mind and Mayday in girl and boy,
Most, O maid’s child, thy choice and worthy the winning.

Gerard Manley Hopkins.
a) IN MEMORY OF EVA GORE-BOOTH AND CON MARKEWIECZ

The light of evening, Lissadell,
Great windows open to the south,
Two girls in silk kimonos, both
Beautiful, one a gazelle.
But a raving autumn shears
Blossom from the summer’s wreath;
The older is condemned to death,
Pardoned, drags out lonely years
Conspiring among the ignorant.
I know not what the younger dreams –
Some vague Utopia – and she seems,
When withered old and skeleton-gaunt,
An image of such politics.
Many a time I think to seek
One or the other out and speak
Of that old Georgian mansion, mix
Pictures of the mind, recall
That table and the talk of youth,
Two girls in silk kimonos, both
Beautiful, one a gazelle.

Dear shadows, now you know it all,
All the folly of a fight
With a common wrong or right.
The innocent and the beautiful.
Have no enemy but time;
Arise and bid me strike a match
And strike another till time catch;
Should the conflagration climb,
Run till all the sages know.
We the great gazebo built,
They convicted us of guilt;
Bid me strike a match and blow.

THE WIFE’S TALE

When I had spread it all on linen cloth
Under the hedge, I called them over.
The hum and gulp of the thresher ran down
And the big belt slewed to a standstill, straw
Hanging undelivered in the jaws.
There was such quiet that I heard their boots
Crunching the stubble twenty yards away.

He lay down and said, “Give these fellows theirs,
I’m in no hurry,” plucking grass in handfuls
And tossing it in the air. “That looks well.”
(He nodded at my white cloth on the grass.)
“I declare a woman could lay out a field
Though boys like us have little call for cloths.”
He winked, then watched me as I poured a cup
And buttered the thick slices that he likes.
“It’s thrashing better than I thought, and mid It’s good clean seed. Away over there and look.”
Always this inspection has to be made
Even when I don’t know what to look for.

But I ran my hand in the half-filled bags
Hooked to the slots. It was hard as shot,
Innumerable and cool. The bags gaped
Where the chutes ran back to the stilled drum
And forks were stuck at angles in the ground
As javelins might mark lost battlefields.
I moved between them back across the stubble.

They lay in the ring of their own crusts and dregs,
Smoking and saying nothing. “There’s good yield,
Isn’t there? – as proud as if he were the land itself –
“Enough for crushing and sowing both.”
And that was it. I’d come and he had shown me,
So I belonged no further to the work.
I gathered cups and folded up the cloth
And went. But they still kept their ease,
Spread out, unbuttoned, grateful, under the trees.

DONAL ÓG

It is late last night the dog was speaking of you;
the snipe was speaking of you in her deep marsh.
It is you are the lonely bird through the woods;
and that you may be without a mate until you find me.

You promised me, and you said a lie to me,
that you would be before me where the sheep are flocked;
I gave a whistle and three hundred cries to you,
and I found nothing there but a bleating lamb.

You promised me a thing that was hard for you,
a ship of gold under a silver mast;
twelve towns with a market in all of them,
and a fine white court by the side of the sea.

You promised me a thing that is not possible,
that you would give me gloves of the skin of a fish;
that you would give me shoes of the skin of a bird;
and a suit of the dearest silk in Ireland.

My mother said to me not to be talking with you today,
or tomorrow, or on the Sunday;
it was a bad time she took for telling me that;
it was shutting the door after the house was robbed.

My heart is as black as the blackness of the sloe,
or as the black coal that is on the smith’s forge;
or as the sole of a shoe left in white halls;
it was you put that darkness over my life.

You have taken the east from me; you have taken the west from me;
you have taken what is before me and what is behind me;
you have taken the moon, you have taken the sun from me;
and my fear is great that you have taken God from me!

Anon.

In Xanadu did Kubla Khan
A stately pleasure-dome decree:
Where Alph, the sacred river, ran
Through caverns measureless to man
Down to a sunless sea.
So twice five miles of fertile ground
With walls and towers were girdled round:
And there were gardens bright with sinuous
rills
Where blossom’d many an incense-bearing
 tree;
And here were forests ancient as the hills,
Enfolding sunny spots of greenery.

But oh! that deep romantic chasm which slated
Down the green hill athwart a cedarn cover!
A savage place! as holy and enchanted
As e’er beneath a waning moon was haunted
By woman wailing for her demon-lover!
And from this chasm, with ceaseless turmoil
seething,
As if this earth in fast thick pants were
breathing,
A mighty fountain momentely was forced:
Amid whose swift half-intermitted burst
Hugh fragments vaulted like rebounding hail,
Or chaffy grain beneath the thresher’s frail:
And ’mid these dancing rocks at once and ever
It flung up momentely the sacred river.

A damsel with a dulcimer
In a vision once I saw:
It was an Abyssinian maid,
And on her dulcimer she played,
Singing of Mount Abora.
Could I revive within me
Her symphony and song
To such a deep delight ’twould win me,
That with music loud and long,
I would build that dome with air,
That sunny dome! Those caves of ice!
And all who heard should see them there,
And all should cry, Beware! Beware!
His flashing eyes, his floating hair!
Weave a circle round him thrice,
And close your eyes with holy dread,
For he on honey-dew hath fed,
And drunk the milk of Paradise.

Samuel Taylor Coleridge.

OUT, OUT

The buzz saw snarled and rattled in the yard
And made dust and dropped stove-length sticks of wood,
Sweet-scented stuff when the breeze drew across it.
And from there those that lifted eyes could count
Five mountain ranges one behind the other
Under the sunset far into Vermont.
And the saw snarled and rattled, snarled and rattled,
As it ran light, or had to bear a load.
And nothing happened; day was all but done.
Call it a day, I wish they might have said
To please the boy by giving him the half hour
That a boy counts so much when saved from work.
His sister stood beside them in her apron
To tell them “Supper”. At the word, the saw
As if to prove saws knew what supper meant,
Leaped out at the boy’s hand, or seemed to leap –
He must have given the hand. However it was,
Neither refused the meeting. But the hand!
The boy’s first outcry was a rueful laugh,
As he swung toward them holding up the hand
Half in appeal, but half as if to keep
The life from spilling. Then the boy saw all –
Since he was old enough to know, big boy
Doing a man’s work, though a child at heart
He saw all spoiled. “Don’t let them cut my hand off –
The doctor, when he comes. Don’t let him, sister!”
So. But the hand was gone already.
The doctor put him in the dark of ether
He lay and puffed his lips out with his breath.
And then the watcher at his pulse took fright.
No one believed. They listened at his heart.
Little – less – nothing! – and that ended it.
No more to build on there. And they, since they Were not the one dead, turned to their affairs.

MY FATHER PERCEIVED AS A VISION OF ST. FRANCIS
for Brendan Kennelly

It was the piebald horse in next door’s garden
frightened me out of a dream
with her dawn whinny. I was back in the boxroom of the house, my brother’s room now, full of ties and sweaters and secrets.
Bottles chinked on the doorstep, the first bus pulled up to the stop.
The rest of the house slept except for my father. I heard him rake the ash from the grate, plug in the kettle, hum a snatch of a tune.
Then he unlocked the back door and stepped out into the garden.

Autumn was nearly done, the first frost whitened the slates of the estate.
He was older than I had reckoned, his hair completely silver, and for the first time I saw the stoop of his shoulder, saw that his leg was stiff. What’s he at?
So early and still stars in the west?

They came then: birds of every size, shape, colour; they came from the hedges and shrubs, from eaves and garden sheds, from the industrial estate, outlying fields, from Dubber Cross they came and the ditches of the North Road.
The garden was a pandemonium when, my father threw up his hands and tossed the crumbs to the air.
The sun cleared O’Reilly’s chimney and he was suddenly radiant, a perfect vision of St. Francis, made whole, made young again, in a Finglas garden.

Paula Meehan.

Performers speak both poems.

The sun is set; the swallows are asleep;
    The bats are flitting fast in the grey air;
The slow soft toads out of damp corners creep,
    And evening’s breath, wandering here and there
Over the quivering surface of the stream,
Wakes not one ripple from its summer dream.

There is no dew on the dry grass tonight,
    Nor damp within the shadow of the trees;
The wind is intermitting, dry, and light;
    And in the inconstant motion of the breeze
The dust and straws are driven up and down,
And whirled about the pavement of the town.

Within the surface of the fleeting river
    The wrinkled image of the city lay,
Immovably unquiet, and for ever
It trembles, but it never fades away…

AFTER THE TITANIC

They said I got away in a boat
And humbled me at the inquiry.  I tell you
I sank as far that night as any Hero.  As I sat shivering on the dark water
I turned to ice to hear my costly
Life go thundering down in a pandemonium of Prams, pianos, sideboards, winches,
Boilers bursting and shredded ragtime.  Now I hide
In a lonely house behind the sea
Where the tide leaves broken toys and hat-boxes
Silently at my door.  The showers of April, flowers of May mean nothing to me, nor the Late light of June, when my gardener
Describes to strangers how the old man stays in bed
On seaward mornings after the nights of Wind, takes his cocaine and will see no-one.  Then it is
I drown again with all those dim
Lost faces I never understood.  My poor soul
Screams out in the starlight, heart
Breaks loose and rolls down like a stone.
Include me in your lamentations.

HUMMING BIRD

I can imagine, in some other world
Primeval-dumb, far back
In that most awful stillness, that only gasped and hummed,
Humming-birds raced down the avenues.

Before anything had a soul,
While life was a heave of Matter, half inanimate,
This little bit chipped off in brilliance
And went whizzing through the slow, vast, succulent stems.

I believe there were no flowers, then
In the world where the humming bird flashed ahead of creation.
I believe he pierced the slow vegetable veins with his long beak.

Probably he was big
As mosses, and little lizards, they say were once big.
Probably he was a jabbing, terrifying monster.

We look at him through the wrong end of the long telescope of Time,
Luckily for us.

D.H. Lawrence.

WOMAN WORK

I’ve got the children to tend
The clothes to mend
The floor to mop
The food to shop
Then the chicken to fry
The baby to dry
I got company to feed
The garden to weed
I’ve got shirts to press
The tots to dress
The cane to be cut
I gotta clean up this hut
Then see about the sick
And the cotton to pick.

Shine on me, sunshine
Rain on me, rain
Fall softly, dewdrops
And cool my brow again.

Storm, blow me from here
With your fiercest wind
Let me float across the sky
‘Till I can rest again.

Fall gently, snowflakes
Cover me with white
Cold icy kisses and
Let me rest tonight.

Sun, rain, curving sky
Mountain, oceans, leaf and stone
Star shine, moon glow
You’re all that I can call my own.

LAST WALTZ

Solo was a Dodo
the last one in the land.
She didn’t go to parties
or dance to birdland bands.
She hadn’t got a partner,
she hadn’t got a friend,
until –

she met a Panda,
a Pandaman called Ben.

Will you dance with me? Asked Solo
Can we be a party pair?
Will you take a sprig of blossom
- will you weave it in my hair?
Will you hold me very tightly?
- can I hold you to my breast?
- can I snuggle really closely
  upon your hairy chest?

The woodland flutes played softly,
the evening sang its charms
to a Panda dancing slowly
with a Dodo
in its arms.

EITHER:
ON A CAT, AGEING

He blinks upon the hearth-rug,
And yawns in deep content,
Accepting all the comforts
That Providence has sent.

Louder he purrs and louder,
In one glad hymn of praise
For all the night’s adventures,
For quiet restful days.

Life will go on for ever,
With all that cat can wish;
Warmth and the glad procession
Of fish and milk and fish.

Only – the thought disturbs him –
He’s noticed once or twice,
The times are somehow breeding
A nimbler race of mice.

Alexander Gray.

OR:

WILDLIFE

Why do we say wildlife
When wildlife isn’t wild?
   It’s mostly soft and gentle,
   it’s mostly meek and mild.
We don’t see lions bombing
and tigers driving tanks,
platoons of pink flamingos
or regiments of yaks.
We don’t see wars of blue whales
or rabbits flying jets,
walruses with shotguns
or parachuting pets.
To me wildlife is gentle
it loves to hide away,
it’s mostly shy and silent
it likes to run and play.
   It’s really us that’s wildlife
our lifestyle’s really wild bombs
and bangs
and burnings
father, mother, child.

Peter Dixon.
Leonardo, painter, taking
Morning air
On Market Street
Saw the wild birds in their cages
Silent in
The dust, the heat.

Took his purse from out his pocket
Never questioning
The fee,
Bore the cages to the green shade
Of a hill-top
Cypress tree.

“What you lost,” said Leonardo,
“I now give to you
Again,
Free as noon and night and morning,
As the sunshine,
As the rain.”

And he took them from their prisons,
Held them to
The air, the sky;
Pointed them to the bright heaven.
“Fly!” said Leonardo.
“Fly!”

OR:

MARMALADE

He’s buried in the bushes,
with dockleaves round his grave,
A crimecat desperado
and his name is Marmalade.
He’s the cat that caught the pigeon,
that stole the neighbour’s meat…
and tore the velvet curtains
and stained the satin seat.
He’s the cat that spoilt the laundry,
he’s the cat that spilt the stew,
and chased the lady’s poodle
and scratched her daughter too.

But –
No more we’ll hear his cat flap,
or scratches at the door,
or see him at the window,
or hear his catnap snore.
So –
Ring his grave with pebbles,
erect a noble sign –
For here lies Marmalade
and Marmalade was MINE.

Peter Dixon.

Sooty and Sweep on a Windy Day,
We’ve painted the posters, had lots of fun,
But will anyone come?

We’ve thought of refreshments, we’ve baked some tarts,
We’ve practised the play, we all know our parts,
The costumes are sewn, the scenery’s done,
But will anyone come?

We’ve poured out the orange juice, 2p a cup,
We’ve set out the classroom and tidied it up,
The programmes are printed, and playtime’s begun,
But has anyone come?

They’re here! They’ve arrived! There’s a queue at the door,
Twenty or thirty, fifty or more,
“5p a ticket for Children in Need,
Please take your seats with all possible speed,
Welcome to Sooty – we’re ready to go,
Ladies and Gentlemen - ON WITH THE SHOW!”

CASTING A SPELL

Learn a spell. It takes some time
First you must have the gift of rhyme,
New images, a melody.
Verse will do but poetry
Sometimes will come if you have luck.
Play tunes, blow trumpets, learn to pluck
The harp. The best of spells are cast
When you have written words to last,
Rich in subtle rhythms and
Right words which most will understand.
Casting a spell’s a secret skill
Which few learn fast. No act of will
On your part hands the gift to you.
Words must surprise and yet ring true.
False sorcerers are everywhere
But the true magic’s deep and rare.

THE BROWN BEAR

In winter,
When the cold winds blow,
When the land
Is covered with snow
The brown bear sleeps.

In winter,
When the nights come soon,
When the land
Freezes beneath the moon
The brown bear dreams.

The brown bear
Dreams of summer heat,
Of berries,
Honey and nuts to eat.
The brown bear sighs.

The brown bear
Stirs, then digs down deep,
Safe and sound
In its winter sleep.
The brown bear dreams.

THE DRAGON

There’s a dragon in our garden
That hatched out under the shed,
Her scales are shaped like teardrops
And glow when she’s been fed.

She sleeps all through the daytime,
Wings folded like a bat,
Gold and green and dreaming
And purring like a cat.

But she’s getting wild and restless
So she’ll fly away quite soon
To the only place
Where a dragon’s safe:
Deep inside the moon.

A KITTEN

He’s nothing much but fur
He runs around in rings,
And two round eyes of blue,
But why we cannot tell;
He has a giant purr
With sideways leaps he springs
And a midget mew.
At things invisible –

He darts and pats the air,
Then half-way through a leap
He starts and pricks his ear,
His started eyeballs close,
When there is nothing there
And he drops off to sleep
For him to see and hear.
With one paw on his nose.

DISTRACTED THE MOTHER SAID TO HER BOY

Distracted the mother said to her boy
“Do you try to upset and perplex and annoy?
Now, give me four reasons – and don’t play the fool –
Why you shouldn’t get up and get ready for school.”

Her son replied slowly, “Well, mother, you see,
I can’t stand the teachers and they detest me;
And there isn’t a boy or a girl in the place
That I like or, in turn, that delights in my face.”

“And I’ll give you two reasons,” she said, “Why you ought Get yourself off to school before you get caught;
Because, first, you are forty and, next, you young fool,
It’s your job to be there.
You’re the head of the school.”

I CAN SEE YOU NOW

When I first met
My blind friend Grace
She said, “Will you please let me
Touch your face?”

I felt her gentle hands
Up on my skin:
She felt my lips and eyebrows
Then my nose and cheeks and chin.

Last of all she felt my hair
And gently held my head
Then with a lovely smile:
“I can see you now,” she said.

Spiders’ webs
Of wintry lace
Jack Frost’s touch

If I should have a garden
I know how it would be,
There’s be daisies and buttercups
And an apple tree.

A dog would chase a ball there,
A bird would sit and sing,
And a little cat would play with
A little piece of string.

And in the very middle
I’d only have to stand
For ladybirds and butterflies
To settle on my hand.

I got up this morning and meant to be good,
But things didn’t happen the way that they should.

I lost my toothbrush

I spilled some sugar
   And after that
I tried to hurry
   And tripped on the cat.

Things may get better. I don’t know when.
I think I’ll go back and start over again.

A FEATHER FROM AN ANGEL

Anton’s box of treasures held
a silver key and a glassy stone,
a figurine made of polished bone
and a feather from an angel.

The figurine was from Borneo,
the stone from France or Italy,
the silver key was a mystery
but the feather came from an angel.

We might have believed him if he’d said
the feather fell from a bleached white crow
but he always replied, “It’s an angel’s, I know,
a feather from an angel.”

We might have believed him if he’d said,
“An albatross let the feather fall.”
But he had no doubt, no doubt at all,
his feather came from an angel.

“I thought I’d dreamt him one night,” he’d say,
“but in the morning I knew he’d been there;
he left a feather on my bedside chair,
a feather from an angel.”

And it seems that all my life I’ve looked for the sort of belief that nothing could shift,
something simple and precious as Anton’s gift,
a feather from an angel.

When daylight fades,
and orange sun dips behind ocean’s rim
then round moon, round as a silver plate
will glow upon the village.
Tide is brimming now,
sea-water swirls and sparkles,
fishing boats all safe on the shore.
Inside the house, leaves are ready,
green leaves arranged by Ibu, mother,
filling them with fruits and cakes of rice,
offerings to carry to the temple.
The procession gathers, everyone is here,
some in clothes of brilliant colours,
purple and blue and red and yellow.
Now at the temple the drum-beat calls,
the rhythm of the gamelan stirs,
mixing magical music.
Children are gasping, laughing, clapping their hands
as puppets throw shadows on a lamp-lit screen
and men in masks act their story of warriors
and girls glide in green sarongs with golden sashes.
Far into the night the fire of festival burns,
eyes grow weary, sleep calls softly…
but dreamy day tomorrow,
holidays begin.

AT THE END OF A SCHOOL DAY

It is the end of a school day
and down the long drive
come bag-swinging, shouting children.
   Deafened, the sky winces.
   The sun gapes in surprise.

Suddenly the runners skid to a stop,
   stand still and stare
at a small hedgehog
   curled up on the tarmac
   like an old, frayed cricket ball.

A girl dumps her bag, tiptoes forward
   and gingerly, so gingerly
carries the creature
   to the safety of a shade hedge.
   Then steps back, watching.

Girl, children, sky and sun
   hold their breath.
There is a silence,
   a moment to remember
   on this warm afternoon in June.

(The Dragon Boat Races)

The air is hushed round the waiting boats;
   water still before the race.
Slowly paddles lift
   above the dragon-prows
like giant wing-bones
   from a waking beast,
stretching into space…

And then…
   they’re off!
Away

Fish scatter in dismay
   as dragon-racers slice the surface.
Wings dip, whip water into waves;
   waves rise like flames,
set light by sun.

Above, flags tug at their fetters,
   desperate to join the fun.
And all around,
   like pumping, thumping, dragon-hearts,
the pounding gongs,
   the beating drum.

CRACKS IN THE PAVEMENT

Those cracks in the pavement, as everyone knows, mustn’t be stepped on. Not even a toe should venture to try it. Don’t laugh, it’s quite true. Let me tell you the story of Brian McGrew who jumped on a crack with an “I don’t care” grin. At once, the crack opened. The boy was dragged in by a large scaly hand. He had time for one shriek, then vanished entirely. Gone for a week, he was found in Australia, mad as a hatter. So don’t say that avoiding the cracks doesn’t matter. Just hop, skip and jump, that’s all you need do, while remembering the story of Brian McGrew.

THE SHOOTING STARS

That night we went out in the dark and saw the shooting stars was one of the best nights ever

It was as if someone was throwing paint across the universe

The stars just kept coming and we “oohed” and “aahed” like on bonfire night

And it didn’t matter they weren’t real stars – just bits of dust on fire burning up in the atmosphere

And we stayed out there for ages standing on this tiny planet staring up at the vast cosmos

And I shivered with the thrill of it all

BIRTHDAY BIKE

For my birthday gift
I had a brand-new bike
With eighteen gears,
   Alloy wheels,
   Lights!

That night I should have slept
But found myself in Space.
I cycled past Mars
   To the stars,
   It was ace!

I didn’t fall (not once)
Just kept on pedalling,
The spokes sparkling silver,
   The dark chain
   Humming.

I reached the Milky Way,
Whizzed up its spangled lanes,
Alone, but so happy!
   Then free-wheeled
   Down again.

Through my open window
I came riding in
Asleep, still in the saddle
   Just as dawn
   Was sliding in!

Midnight. A knock at the door.
Open it? Better had.
Three heavy cats, mean and bad.

They offer protection. I ask, “What for?”
The Boss-cat snarls, “You know the score.
Listen man and listen good

If you wanna stay in the neighbourhood,
Pay your dues or the toms will call
And wail each night on the backyard wall.

Mangle the flowers, and as for the lawn
A smelly minefield awaits you at dawn.”
These guys meant business without a doubt

Three cans of tuna, I handed them out.
They then disappeared like bats into hell
Those bad, bad cats from the CPL.
